

Aziz's anxiety-free guide to the Saudi job market

Insights from Faisal, the Wannabe Data Scientist

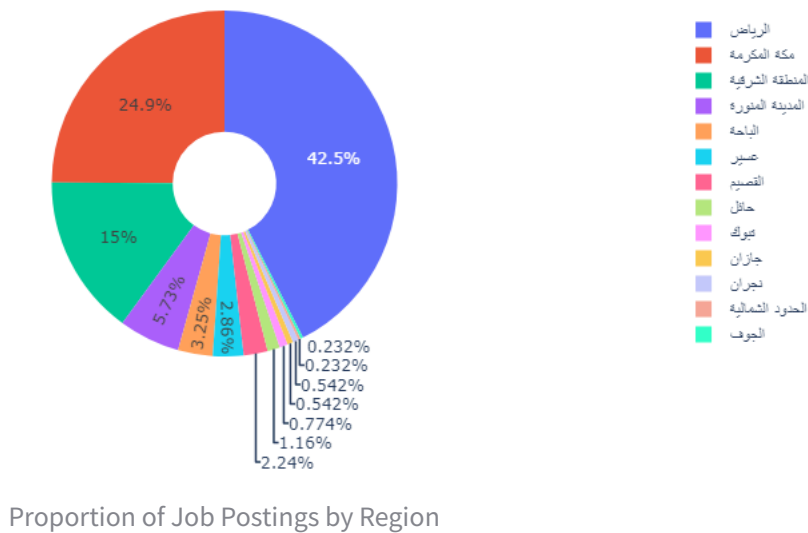

Aziz, a fresh graduate, is ready to enter the job market. He turns to his friend Faisal, a wannabe data scientist, for insights on Saudi Arabia's job market. Faisal analyzes the data and provides key information on job opportunities, gender preferences, salary expectations, and more.

1. Where are the Jobs?

Insight: Job opportunities are concentrated mainly in Riyadh (42.5%), followed by Makkah (24.9%) and the Eastern Province (15%).

Tip for Aziz: To maximize his chances, Aziz should consider looking for jobs in Riyadh or Makkah.

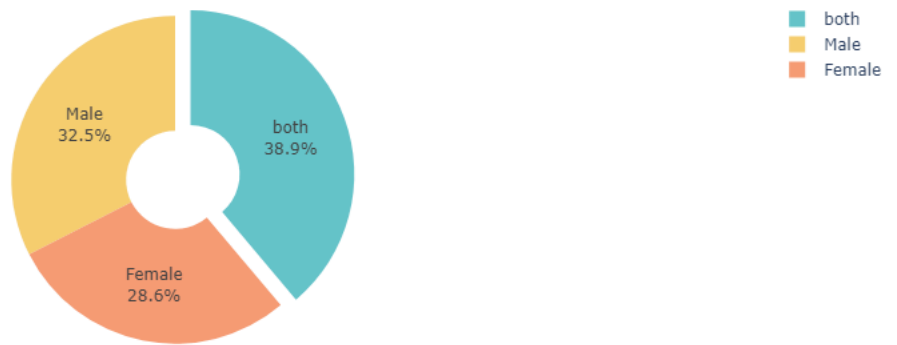

Proportion of Job Postings by Region in KSA

2. Males VS Females

Insight: 38.9% of job postings are open to both genders, while 32.5% prefer male candidates and 28.6% prefer female.

Tip for Aziz: Gender-neutral roles are plentiful, giving him a broad range of options regardless of gender preferences.

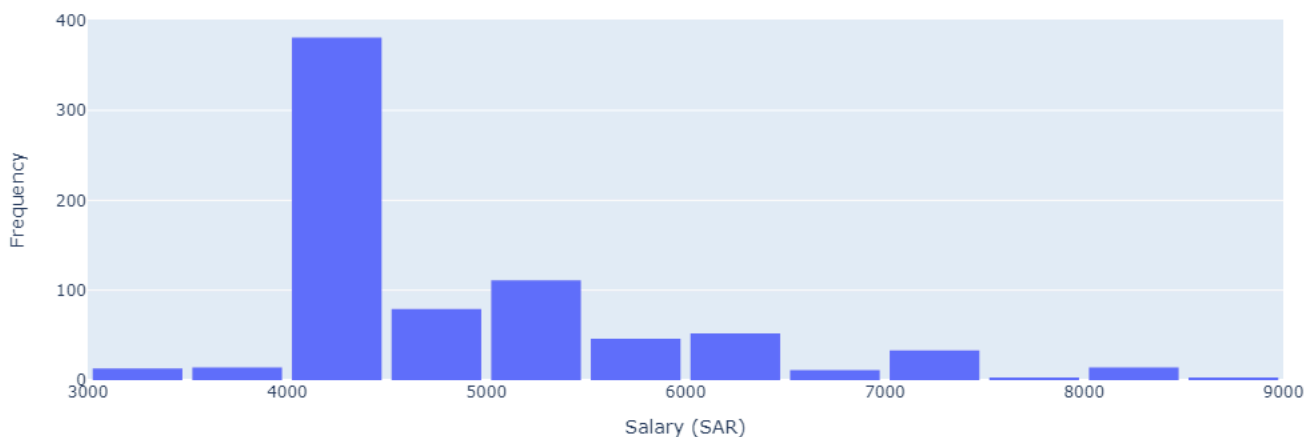

Gender Preferences in Job Postings

3. Brokie or Baller?

Insight: Most fresh graduate positions offer salaries around 4,000 SAR, with higher salaries (up to 9,000 SAR) being less common.

Tip for Aziz: Aziz can set realistic salary expectations at the entry-level and plan his career path accordingly.

Salary Distribution for Fresh Graduates

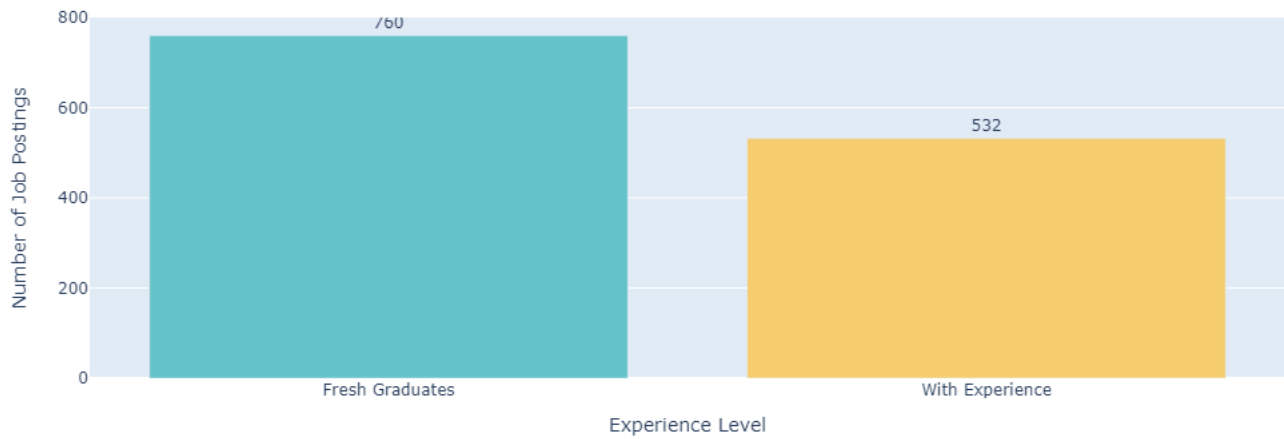

Salary Distribution for Fresh Graduates

4. Fresh Meat or Seasoned Pro?

Insight: There are 760 job postings for fresh graduates compared to 532 for experienced professionals.

Tip for Aziz: The job market is friendly to new grads, with plenty of entry-level openings. Aziz can start applying with confidence!

Job Opportunities for Fresh Graduates vs. Experienced Individuals

Job Opportunities for Fresh Graduates vs. Experienced Individuals

Sooooo, what does this all mean for Aziz?

With Faisal's data-driven guidance, Aziz now has a clear picture of where to focus his job search and what to expect as he embarks on his career. From knowing the best cities for jobs to understanding salary ranges, Aziz is better prepared to enter the job market with confidence.